individual aspects.

This volume represents one of the first comprehensive and interdisciplinary examinations into arsenic's behaviour in air, water, soils, sediments, plants and the human body.

Based on state-of-the-art investigations into the global arsenic cycle, the related

Heterogeneous catalysis had its beginnings in England and France with the work of

scientists such as

Humphrey Davy

(1778–1829),

Michael Faraday

(1791–1867), and

Paul Sabatier

(1854–1941).

Sabatier postulated

that surface

compounds, si- lar to those familiar in bulk

to chemists, were the intermediate species leading to catalytic products. Sabatier proposed, for example, that NiH moieties on a Ni surface were able to hydrogenate ethylene, whereas NiH was not. In the USA, Irving Langmuir concluded just the opposite, namely, that chemisorbed surface species are chemically bound to surfaces and are unlike known molecules. These chemisorbed species were the active participants in catalysis. The equilibrium between gas-phase molecules and adsorbed chemisorbed species (yielding an adsorption isotherm)
